SUBJECT: BIO INFORMATION ON NEW EGYPTIAN AMBASSADOR TO IRAQ

Classified by Acting DCM Michael Corbin for reasons 1.4 (b) and (d).

1. (C) The Egyptian Ministry of Foreign Affairs released in late April a list of names of Egyptian diplomats assigned to new postings, including that of Deputy Assistant Minister for Eastern Arab Affairs, Dr. Ihab Sherif. At the time, the MFA did not reveal that Sherif was slotted to go to Baghdad, since the Iraqi Transitional Government had not yet been officially formed. Sherif was reported to have arrived in Baghdad in late May or early June and we understood he will shortly present his credentials to the Iraqi Government as Egypt's Ambassador to Baghdad. (Note: Sherif's predecessor, Ambassador Mubarak, had been given Ambassadorial title by Cairo but had never presented his credentials to the Iraqi government. This protocol step would have indicated a return to normalized relations. At the time, the Iraqi Embassy in Cairo suggested to Post that the GOE would delay a return to normal diplomatic relations until the December national elections. End note.)

2. (C) Ambassador Sherif is well known to Post, as we have worked closely with him on Middle East peace process and other regional issues over the past several years. Before assuming the Deputy Assistant Minister position at the MFA, Sherif served as the Charge d'Affaires at the Egyptian Embassy in Tel Aviv, Israel, following the recall of Egyptian Ambassador Bassiouni in 2000 during the second Intifada. As a result of his work in Israel and Syria, Sherif is among the most well-informed observers of the Middle East peace process in the Egyptian Foreign Ministry and has been a close confidant to the Minister on this subject.

3. (C) Comment: Sherif considers himself a friend of the United States, and as such has endured criticism from diplomatic colleagues. Regardless, he is tough on U.S. policy in the region, particularly vis-a-vis Israel, but is rarely polemical or confrontational. He has published a number of photographic books on various countries, hoping one day to complete a book on the United States for an Arabic-reading audience. Sherif is interested in reaching out to the U.S. Embassy in Baghdad and would welcome contacts at any and all levels - an unusual characteristic for a member of the protocol-conscious Egyptian diplomatic cadre. Despite his French education and Francophile tendencies, Sherif retains a healthy and constructive attitude toward the United States. We are confident that a relationship with Sherif in Baghdad would be both productive and useful. End comment.
